National American Eagle Day – June 20, 2019

Celebrate the United States' national symbol on National American Eagle Day! On June 20, we set aside time to raise awareness about the bald eagle and to preserve the bird's natural habitat. The holiday is meant to educate others about the birds' importance, and to explore ways we can ensure that the eagles continue to thrive for decades to come. In the 1950s, the bald eagle was at serious risk of becoming extinct. Loss of their natural habitat, hunting, and the use of pesticides that damaged their eggs made caused the population to massively decline. The bird was classified as endangered in the U.S. in 1967. The bird went on to become a prime success story of the Endangered Species Act. The bald eagle began to repopulate and thrive, and in 1995, it was moved from the national endangered species list to the national list of threatened species—a major improvement! As of 2007, the bald eagle is no longer considered threatened and has a healthy population level. National American Eagle Day was launched by the American Eagle Foundation, a Tennessee organization focused on protecting bald eagles and their fellow birds of prey. Bald eagles like to live near large bodies of water, as they mostly eat fish, and are known for their beauty and grace when they soar through the air. They have been known as treasured symbols of the United States since the 1700s.

How to Observe National American Eagle Day

Watch the D.C. Eagle Cam

The D.C. Eagle Cam is a live stream that allows anyone in the world to take a peak into the lives of two bald eagles living in the U.S. National Arboretum in Washington, D.C. A video camera fixed on the eagles' nest offers snapshots of their lives.

Visit the zoo

If your local zoo is home to bald eagles, National American Eagle Day is the perfect time to pay a visit and watch them in action. The San Diego Zoo, the National Zoo, and the Saint Louis Zoo all house bald eagles—and there's a good chance that a zoo in your area does the same.

Do some volunteer work for preservation groups

Seek out local preservation groups in your area and offer to lend a hand. Whether you assist a charity that advocates for bald eagles, or an organization that is focused on other species that are still endangered, your help can make a difference! Check out the American Eagle Foundation to get started.

Why National American Eagle Day is Important

They are epic

Most Americans recognize the image of the bald eagle right away, but few of us know much about how the eagles live or what role they play in our natural ecosystem. The American bald eagle is the only eagle unique to North America, and they can be found all over the continent, from Alaska to Northern Mexico. They are also one of the largest birds in North America, with a wingspan of 80 inches, and build massive nests that are 5 to 6 feet in diameter.

They are champions of endangered species

Not too long ago, the future of the bald eagle seemed dire. Thanks to the hard work of conservationists, and the birds' classification as endangered species, anxiety over their extinction is a thing of the past. It's a great reminder that with awareness and determination, we can save endangered species who need protection. Perhaps black rhinos, Bengal tigers, and other endangered species can have similar success stories someday.

They are totally patriotic

The bald eagle was named the National Emblem of the United States in 1782, and its image is used throughout the country as a symbol of this great nation. The image of the bald eagle can be found on gold coins, the silver dollar, the half dollar, and the quarter, plus on the Great Seal of the United States. According to John F. Kennedy, "The founding fathers made an appropriate choice when they selected the bald eagle as the emblem of the nation. The fierce beauty and proud independence of this great bird aptly symbolizes the strength and freedom of America."

World Oceans Day – June 8, 2019

Since 2002, The Ocean Project has coordinated World Oceans Day on June 8. With about 2,000 global partners, they celebrate the ocean's beauty and importance. And boy, is it important. We get a lot of our food and medicines from the deep blue, and it helps to keep the climate in check. Oh, and there's this thing about all water being the "lungs of the earth"—as it turns out, the majority of oxygen we breathe comes from the ocean. We always felt that the waves breathed some life into us. (Alright, once or twice it was the life guard, but that doesn't diminish the worth of one our most valuable resources.) However, if we don't take the steps to conserve it, we'll lose a lot more than a spot for a weekend getaway. So dive in and do your part to keep big blue going strong.

How to Observe World Oceans Day

Have a look at The Ocean Project's Website

Not sure what to do for World Oceans Day? The Ocean Project's website will give you a bunch of ideas for celebrations. But if you'd rather someone else take the reigns, it will point you to some festivities in your vicinity. Also, you'll have the chance to pledge to the planet. You won't be talking directly to mother Earth, but an internet poll's not a bad way to go.

Clean up and hit the beach

One of the best ways to celebrate our beautiful ocean is, of course, to go visit. However, keep sustainability top of mind. Getting your barbecue on? Go to the store to get supplies with a reusable tote bag instead of a plastic one. Throwing a party? Bring your own plates instead of throwing away plastic ones. After putting so much thought into conservation, it'd be shame to throw it all away...by throwing it all away the beach. So clean up after your party and hopefully others will follow your example.

Take the "We are blue, tell two" challenge

This might come as a shocker, but the color to wear on World Oceans Day is blue. Finding the right attire shouldn't be hard. However, you'll have to learn two facts about the ocean to tell others. It could be something you've learned here, or some knowledge from your fellow "We are blue, tell two" challengers. Probably not the best idea to tell the same facts to the person who taught you, but repetition does drive the point home. Whatever you choose to, have fun and stay blue!

Why World Oceans Day is Important

It changes our perspective of the ocean

For many people, the beach spells fun in the sun. While taking a dip feels great, we sometimes don't think about what that water really means to us. It's essential to the biosphere and we want to make sure that future generations get to enjoy it. Chances are, the creatures that live there will also appreciate it (there are over 1 million of them!). And when you look out into the distance and see ships going to who knows where, it's a strong reminder that we're all connected.

It motivates us to do our part

Trash lying on the beach will never look the same to us. So much of our waste isn't biodegradable, and the ocean is left cleaning up our mess. Dumping recyclables into the proper bin is a good first step, but we have to carry that habit back home. Even if you don't live near the coast, let your friends and family know how recycling puts a big smile on the ocean's face.

It gives us a reason to celebrate the ocean's majesty

We never need an excuse to go to the beach, but we'll gladly take one. At times, we just have to pinch ourselves at how gorgeous the place can be; a sunset reflected on the water is like something out of a painting, and the beach bodies aren't too shabby, either. Most importantly, the ocean gives us the perfect opportunity to empty our heads and relax. Some moments speak for themselves so we don't have to. It's not like the squawking seagulls would let us get a word in, anyway.

A STORY OF HOPE FROM GUATEMALA

Life and Dignity of the Human Person

Catholic social teaching inspires and guides how we are to live and work in the world. In this principle, Life and Dignity of the Human Person, Jesus reminds us that we are all made in God's image and likeness. That means that every human being has a special value and a purpose. We need to care for each other so we can be the people God calls us to be.

Encounter Norma

For young families living in the mountains of Guatemala, raising a baby can be hard. Most families grow corn and beans for a living, but a long-standing drought has caused harvests to shrink. There are few job opportunities, which means putting food on the table is a daily challenge. That's why when Norma discovered she was pregnant, she wondered how she would manage. "When I was young, my mom and dad didn't have money to buy much food," she says. "My mom would split one egg among four children." Norma wanted more for her son, Victor.

But at age 20, she didn't have much experience beyond helping her mother around the house. So, she looked for help. She found it in a CRS-sponsored program that teaches young mothers how to raise healthy children, grow nutritious food in small gardens and manage a healthy diet. Plus, CRS provided Norma with food throughout her pregnancy and monthly medical check-ups during Victor's first two years of life.

"I learned a lot of beautiful things," Norma says. "I learned how to take care of my boy and what foods to feed him so that he can grow healthy and strong." Now, Norma is sharing what she learned with others as a "mother monitor." "It makes me proud to share the experience I had and the lessons I learned with other women," she says. It makes Norma proud—and makes her community a better place to raise a family.

Café Owner Hires a Felon to Wash Dishes

When a homeless man walked into Cesia Abigail Baires' restaurant asking for money, she didn't give him the typical response.

She looked at him and said, "Why don't you have a job? You know nothing is given to me for free right?"

He replied, "Well, I have a lot of felonies and no one wants to hire me for that, so now I had to turn myself to the streets and get money the only way I know, stealing and asking for money."

"He told me about his situation. He said he got felonies, and nobody wants to hire him. Especially around this area if you look homeless they won't even let you in," said Baires. "To me that's unacceptable."

Seeing as she was short-staffed that day, Cesia decided she would give the man a shot working as a dishwasher in her Minneapolis cafe. With wide eyes and a big smile, he replied that he'd do anything for some food.

But as badly as this man longed for his next meal, she was stunned when she saw what he did with the food she gave him AND that he wanted to pay her for it.

"He only ate half of it, then one of his lady friends walked by and he wrapped half of his food and ran to the door and gave the food to her," said Baires. "I said, 'Marcus do you know the lady over there?' and he said 'No, but I know that she is hungry so I gave her my food.'"

After two weeks, he only continued to impress Baires and her staff with his selfless heart. She took to Facebook to share her experience, and it's since accumulated over 127,000 likes and 40,000 shares.

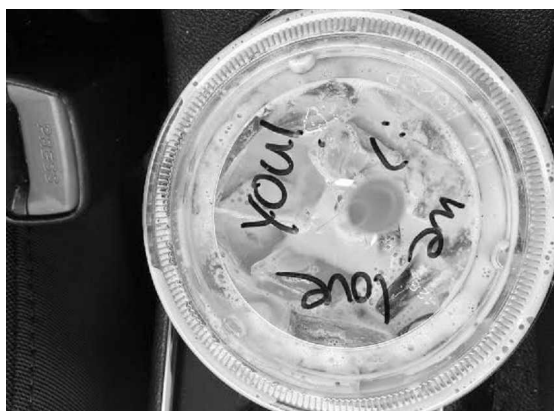

"He has been a blessing for me," Baires told ABC News. "I don't see it as me being a blessing to him. I see it as me being blessed, so I can bless him, so he can bless me."

What a beautiful cycle of blessing that is!

When we consider what Jesus did for us on the cross, we all have a "criminal" past. Sometimes all people need is a second chance and a little dose of humanity to let the good in them shine through.

Wife Sobs in Coffee Drive-Thru After Husband Dies—Then She Sees 3 Words Written on Her Cup

"It's interesting when you're in crisis the subtle things you do to shield people from knowing how bad things really are or how sad you really feel. After all, as the caretaker, you have to be the strong one. You have to hold it together. You have to make sure everybody else is ok."

Those are the words of Diana Register, a heartbroken widow in the throes of grief over the loss of her husband to pancreatic cancer.

Unwilling to drag others down or ignite feelings of pity from friends, family, and strangers alike, Diana often found herself seeking out hiding places to let it all out.

In fact, for her, the grieving process started long before she had to lay her sweet husband in the ground.

She explains that even before her husband's cancer diagnosis, she would search for places to go where people couldn't see the uncontrolled waterfalls from her eyes that silently screamed her pain — the pain of the loss that she had not yet experienced, but soon would.

“During my husband’s cancer journey, I found the most interesting places to cry where he, or anybody else wouldn’t see me,” she wrote to Love What Matters.

“The closet was a favorite. The shower. But when I wasn’t home, it was parking lots that became an asphalt covered oasis. I found very early on that red lights didn’t work well because people look around when they’re stopped waiting for the light to turn green. They’ll catch you with mascara tears and while they won’t say anything, there’s that awkward moment where you lock eyes and you know they’re secretly wondering what’s wrong with you. And then there’s that feeling you have after a tragedy where you don’t care what somebody thinks of you but at the same time, you don’t really want to have to explain anything.”

That’s why parking lots became her safe haven to cry it all out. While they were often packed with shoppers, Diana noticed that people were generally too self-occupied with the mission they were on to pay much attention to the mascara bleeding down her cheeks.

But as grief often goes, she couldn’t always perfectly time when or where the blues would hit her.

One day, as she was about to place her order in the Dutch Brothers coffee drive-thru, the wave of sadness hit her like a tidal wave in the middle of her conversation with a friend.

“I could barely catch my breath and the ugly crying started,” said Diana. “The problem was, I was stuck in the coffee line. At Dutch Brothers. The one place where all the workers are young, happy and jamming out to music. And there was no way out. I was literally blocked in, so unless I wanted to back right up into the SUV behind me, I was about to be seen for the mess I really was.”

In a split-second decision, she decided to face the barista in her broken state and place her order. But what Diana did NOT expect was the beautiful surprise she received at the window:

“She took one look at me and saw how disheveled I was and said nothing. She just handed me my drink. A drink I didn’t order because I couldn’t even muster the words, but a drink she would know I wanted.

I tried to smile when I took it from her and drove away and finished my call. By this time, I had pulled into a parking stall and was trying to regain my composure. I reached for my iced coffee, and when I looked down in the cup holder, I saw it.

A pink straw, and the words ‘We love you’ written around it.”

The unbelievably sweet and simple act of kindness at a time when she needed it most left Diana “ugly crying again.” But this time, for a different reason.

“This girl barely knew me,” she shared. “I don’t even think at the time she knew my story. All she knew was that at that moment, I was hurting. She couldn’t fix it. We couldn’t talk about it. She couldn’t hug me. So she used the only tool she had in that instance – a pen, and a pink straw.

She wanted me to know I wasn’t alone. And that whatever trial I was going through, that there were people out there who cared about me. That regardless of knowing all the details, they cared anyway.”

That strikingly simple act left a profound impact on Diana’s heart.

That moment taught her that even the tiniest act of kindness can change someone’s life for the better. And she wanted to be a part of the movement.

“I take that lesson with me wherever I go and I retell that story to anybody who will listen,” said Diana. “Because I want them —no, I need them— to know how powerful their actions can be to a person in pain.”

Now she visits a different Dutch Brothers, but nonetheless, the legacy of the ‘pink-straw girl’ moves on:

“I don’t know what she’s doing now, but to me, she left a legacy. A legacy of kindness.”

Now, every time Diana visits a new stand, she asks for a pink straw just as a reminder that no matter what she’s facing, “there’s always somebody out there who cares.”

And that’s not the end of the “pink straw” movement that evolved into something even more beautiful.

Mom Forgets Purse at Chick-fil-A. When They FedEx It Back, She's Stunned by What's Inside!

Whether it be opening on Sundays to help those in crisis, giving out free meals to the homeless, or holding makeshift church services, it seems every few weeks, Chick-fil-A is doing something amazing to make us all wanna "EAT MOR CHIKIN."

And their above-and-beyond dedication to customer service has just been put on viral display once again when one mom accidentally forgot her purse at a Lubbock, Texas location. While most would be panicked that they wouldn't receive all of their valuable belongings back, Lindsey Jones got back MORE than she bargained for.

She shared her heartwarming story of what one kind Chick-fil-A manager did on Facebook, and it's just one more reason to eat what we affectionately know as "The Lord's chicken."

Definitely living up to their Christian roots, this is one Chick-fil-A location worth celebrating! Read the story in full in the Facebook post below:

"As my family and I traveled back to Lorena from Taos, NM, we stopped at this Chick-fil-a restaurant to grab lunch to-go. Approximately THREE hours later when we stopped for gas in Abilene, I realized I must have left my purse back in Lubbock at Chick-fil-a. I called and spoke to a very nice woman named Darcy who assured me that they had my purse and would ship it to me right away.

After thinking about all the very important things in my purse that I would need ASAP, I called back and spoke to a manager named Casey. He was incredibly helpful and understanding. He took my purse to FedEx and had it shipped to me "Priority Overnight". With it being a Saturday delivery, and being that I carry a pretty large hand bag that weighed 7 lbs, you can imagine it was NOT a cheap shipment!! When I called to give him a FedEx account number to use to pay for it, he told me not to worry about it because it was already taken care of!!!! I was blown away by the kindness and generosity shown to me by the staff at Chick-fil-a on 4th & Frankford in Lubbock.

I woke up this morning to a knock on the door from the FedEx guy with a big box containing not only my purse, but 6 coupon/gift cards for free food at Chick-fil-a, and a couple of plush cows saying "EAT MOR CHIKIN" I can not thank them enough for everything they did to help me get my purse back as quickly as possible! This situation completely restored my faith in humanity! Not only was my purse found by good, honest people, but they also went above and beyond to help fix a problem that was 1000% my fault to begin with! So, thank you, thank you, thank you Darcy & Casey for being so awesome!!! — feeling amazed at Chick-fil-A at 4th & Frankford."

“You’re Going to Kill Your Baby”: Dad of 4 Adopts Heroin-Addicted Newborn, 90 Days Later Reports Stunning Update

The nation fell in love with Officer Ryan Holets earlier this year when President Trump recognized the hero father of four in his State of the Union Address.

“Last year, Ryan was on duty when he saw a pregnant, homeless woman preparing to inject heroin,” Trump shared, as all eyes turned to the Holets standing beside First Lady Melania. “When Ryan told her she was going to harm her unborn child, she began to weep. She told him she didn’t know where to turn but badly wanted a safe home for her baby.”

“You’re going to kill your baby,” the concerned officer warned, who then received an immediate revelation from God.

“In that moment, Ryan said he felt God speak to him: ‘You will do it — because you can.’ He heard those words,” Trump announced to the American people. “He went home to tell his wife Rebecca. In an instant, she agreed to adopt. The Holets named their new daughter Hope.”

...A name certainly appropriate for a baby rescued from such dire circumstances, with the hope of a new life.

“To me, the most important thing is that she has a family who loves her, and she’s gonna grow up in an entirely different environment than she could have,” says Ryan. “And that’s the most important. This will all fade away.”

The Albuquerque cop could have taken the woman (Crystal) and her partner (Tom) to jail for shooting up, but instead, the dad of four decided to not only adopt their child but also help them get clean and back on their feet.

Ryan recently shared an extremely encouraging update, reporting on Crystal and Tom’s major progress over the last several months.

“Tom has graduated from the program last [weekend],” he wrote. “He is temporarily staying on property doing work for the rehab facility. Crystal is preparing for her graduation and looking into which halfway house she will be staying at after. They are fast approaching 90 days sober!”

The kind-hearted officer has started a GoFundMe page to raise money for the couples’ housing that is now only a few hundred dollars short of achieving its $25,000 goal.

“Looking at the latest photos of Tom and Crystal brings me back,” Ryan added in a separate post. “So amazed at the challenges they have overcome to get where they are. Thank you to everyone who has helped! We could never have done this alone.”

Mexican Fisherman Meets Harvard MBA What Really Matters in Life?

A vacationing American businessman standing on the pier of a quaint coastal fishing village in southern Mexico watched as a small boat with just one young Mexican fisherman pulled into the dock. Inside the small boat were several large yellowfin tuna. Enjoying the warmth of the early afternoon sun, the American complimented the Mexican on the quality of his fish.

"How long did it take you to catch them?" the American casually asked.

"Oh, a few hours," the Mexican fisherman replied.

"Why don't you stay out longer and catch more fish?" the American businessman then asked.

The Mexican warmly replied, "With this I have more than enough to meet my family's needs."

The businessman then became serious, "But what do you do with the rest of your time?"

Responding with a smile, the Mexican fisherman answered, "I sleep late, play with my children, watch ball games, and take siesta with my wife. Sometimes in the evenings I take a stroll into the village to see my friends, play the guitar, sing a few songs..."

The American businessman impatiently interrupted, "Look, I have an MBA from Harvard, and I can help you to be more profitable. You can start by fishing several hours longer every day. You can then sell the extra fish you catch. With the extra money, you can buy a bigger boat. With the additional income that larger boat will bring, before long you can buy a second boat, then a third one, and so on, until you have an entire fleet of fishing boats."

Proud of his own sharp thinking, he excitedly elaborated a grand scheme which could bring even bigger profits, "Then, instead of selling your catch to a middleman you'll be able to sell your fish directly to the processor, or even open your own cannery. Eventually, you could control the product, processing and distribution. You could leave this tiny coastal village and move to Mexico City, or possibly even Los Angeles or New York City, where you could even further expand your enterprise."

Having never thought of such things, the Mexican fisherman asked, "But how long will all this take?"

After a rapid mental calculation, the Harvard MBA pronounced, "Probably about 15-20 years, maybe less if you work really hard."

"And then what, señor?" asked the fisherman.

"Why, that's the best part!" answered the businessman with a laugh. "When the time is right, you would sell your company stock to the public and become very rich. You would make millions."

"Millions? Really? What would I do with it all?" asked the young fisherman in disbelief.

The businessman boasted, "Then you could happily retire with all the money you've made. You could move to a quaint coastal fishing village where you could sleep late, play with your grandchildren, watch ball games, and take siesta with your wife. You could stroll to the village in the evenings where you could play the guitar and sing with your friends all you want."

The moral of the story is: Know what really matters in life, and you may find that it is already much closer than you think.

A Charmed Life

I ride the bus to work everyday. I'm a people-watcher, and I live in a small town, so I see many of the same people get on the bus with me everyday, on their ride to and from work. For many months, I noticed an elderly man get on at one of the stops, and always head to the back of the bus.

He wore the same clothes every day, and they were well-worn, but clean. I never spoke with this gentleman, but I could tell he seemed like he led a simple existence. One day, I had decided to drive to/from work, and I noticed the gentleman on the street corner I was passing, with a sign in his hand asking for financial assistance.

I went home that day, and wrote him a note, saying I was grateful for what little I had in my life, and that I wanted to share some of it with him. I included a small amount of money, and the next day I gave him the note and money in a small envelope when he got on the bus. The next day, he handed me a note on the bus.

The note read: Hi Larissa, Thank you very much for your generosity. The money will be used to buy next month's bus pass. Your note certainly provided a very pleasant, uplifting start to the week. I hope you continue to enjoy a charmed life. ~John I will keep his not forever! We now smile and nod to each other on the bus every morning. What a charmed life I have!

Today was an interesting day. My son and I walked home a lost beagle dog to the owners. They had their phone number on the tag, but it wasn't working number. It had an address close to us, so we took it home. Turns out it was an elderly couple, the guy fell and the dogs got out of the gate.

They were so grateful to get the beagle mix back, but they had also lost their Shitzu. I told them we'll be on the look out for him. A couple of hours went past, then my friend next door texted me about a white dog that had came over. It was Shitzu! I told her that we knew where he lives, so we took another long walk to get little boy home to the owners...

These students who “neighbored” their peers.

In response to the ongoing gun violence, mass shootings, and savage deaths of students in the classroom, thousands of high schoolers across the country participated in National School Walkout Day this March.

While many think “walking out” is the answer to fighting school violence, one high school equipped with sticky notes and hearts for change chose to make a difference in their community by “walking up.”

Arbor Preparatory High School students were each given 17 sticky notes to symbolize the 17 lives lost in the most recent school shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida. Arbor Prep students were encouraged to leave encouraging notes for 14 students and 3 adults.

“As I walked the halls I was overcome with pride for these kids,” Danielle Rae shared on Facebook. “Not a single locker was untouched and they took special care to ensure that everyone from admin to the tech guy and custodian received some love.”

When we love our neighbors, we fill hearts instead of letting hate and loneliness fester.

Stories of People Helping the Homeless that went Viral

Over Half a Million People were experiencing homelessness in the US in 2017, according to a report from the US Department of Housing and Urban Development. That's 12% more people than the previous year. There are organization such as shelters and soup kitchens to help homeless individuals get back on their feet, But sometimes a human connection sparks a viral moment that can change someone's life. Here are 9 heart-warming stories of people who helped someone in need--and the chain reactions that their acts of kindness created. Tony Carlson, a police officer with the Tallahassee Police Department, Pulled into a gas station and noticed a homeless man struggling with an electric razor, trying to shave for a job interview at McDonald's. Carlson tightened a screw on the razor and helped the man, named Phil, shave his beard. A patron at the gas station noticed their interaction and posted a video online, which was then shared by the Police Department's Official Facebook page. Senator Marco Rubio's office then helped Phil acquire the necessary paperwork to complete his job application and get hired at McDonald's according to CBS News.

Lauren Puryear uses her extreme Couponing Skills to feed thousands of people. Lauren Puryear, a Mental Health Clinician, set a goal of providing 30,000 meals to the people in need by her 30th birthday. She founded an organization called For the Love of Others and uses her extreme couponing skills for charity. "There are coupons in the Sunday paper, or online that you can print... so I collect as many as I can, match them to the store, and that is how I am able to get the items for free," she told NJ.com.

A woman donated all the food from her canceled $30,000 wedding to the homeless. Sarah Cummings of Carmel, Indiana, calling off her wedding and couldn't refund what she'd spent to feed and entertain 170 guests. So she invited the residents of a local homeless shelter to partake in the bourbon-glazed meatballs, goat cheese and garlic bruschetta, chicken breast with artichokes, and wedding cake while wearing formal attire donated by local businesses and residents. "I will at least have some kind of happy memory to pull from," she told The Indy Star.

A Bay Area homeless Man was offered a Job after a photo of Him went viral on Facebook. Mat Cordoza literally gave the shirt off his back to Rocky Been, a homeless man he met at Clearwater Beach. He then posted a photo of Been, writing that "I'm not sharing this post for attention or likes but to show how happy some thing as small as a sweater to keep warm can make somebody feel like gold," according to Fox 15 News.

The one small act garnered a wide-ranging response of people who wanted to help. Crabby's Bar and Grill in Clearwater Beach offered him a job, and a GOFundMe campaign raised enough money to provide him with temporary shelter. "I am so amazed how people want to show their love and want to help me. I just can't get over it," Been told Fox 15.

A man turned his truck into a Rolling Shower Mobile for the Homeless. A mobile Shower. Shower to the People from YouTube... Pastor Jake Austin created Shower to the People to give people who are experiencing homelessness access to a hot shower. His truck contains a mobile shower that hooks up to fire hydrants in the St. Louis area. Shower to the People also provides jobs making soap. "Good hygiene promotes health, fosters hope, and restores dignity to those who may have lost it," Austin said in a video on the Organization's YouTube Channel.

Celebrity Barber Jason Schneidman Gives FREE Haircuts to the Homeless. Schneidman gives a man a haircut. ~INSIDER When Jason Schneidman isn't styling Bruno Mars or Hugh Jackman's hair, he's giving free haircuts to people experiencing homelessness in Los Angeles. "What I fund in helping homeless people with haircuts in their appearance changes, and their attitude changes, and then also the people around them see these people differently," he previously told INSIDER.

A Videographer made a Viral Video Showing How to Use Amazon Prime Now to Deliver Necessities to People Experiencing Homeless. Rob Bliss showed people how to use Amazon Prime Now's instant Delivery to help the homeless. ~Rob Bliss on his YouTube~ Rob Bliss took advantage of Amazon Prime Now's instant delivery feature to help people with no address of their own.

"I had been thinking about how popular apps could be repurposed from their original uses, and it came to me that apps that deliver within one to 2 hours could likely make deliveries to people in need, too," Bliss told TODAY. In a video posted to YouTube, which Bliss writes is not affiliated with Amazon in any way, Bliss asks various homeless people if they need anything and orders their requests from them on Amazon Prime Now. In the online order form, he writes instructions for delivering the package-- the name of the person and where they're sitting outside a particular address. Amazon couriers then deliver the necessary items just hours later. The video has over 2 Million views.

After a Homeless Veteran spent his last $20 to buy gas for a stranded stranger, a GoFundMe Page Raised Over $400,000 to help him buy a home--but much of the money remains unaccounted for. Kate McClure and Johnny Bobbitt Jr. became good friends. ~Instagram from Johnny Bobbitt Jr. When Kate McClure of New Jersey ran out of gas on an exit ramp off of Interstate 95, homeless veteran Johnny Bobbitt Jr. used his last $20 to buy her enough gas to get her home. McClure began visiting Bobbitt regularly, providing him with a jacket, gloves, a hat, warm socks, food, and water, as well as extra cash to return the favor. She also set up a GoFundMe Page called "Paying it Forward" with a goal of $10,000. The page has since raised over $400,000 --but Bobbitt says he only received $75,000 and accused McClure and her boyfriend of using the rest as a "personal piggy bank." He is still homeless.

Stephen Hawking provided a 3 Course Meal for homeless people on the Day of his funeral. ~Stephen Hawking. AP Photo, Ted S. Warren~ The late physicist Stephen Hawking paid for 50 Homeless peoples' meals on the day of his funeral through the organization Food Cycle Cambridge. The 3 Course Easter Meal was held at Wesley Methodist Church in Cambridge. Hawking's daughter Lucy contacted the charity and said that the family wanted to make a donation for people to have a "hot meal on Stephen," a spokesperson for the charity told the Evening Standard.

Mom Snaps Pic of Man Crying in Burger King Window—When He Says “I Want It to End,” She Knows Why She’s There

Katy Hurst was out running errands in Independence, Missouri, when she decided to cruise through the Burger King drive thru.

As she pulled around to the pick-up window, Katy spotted a man sitting inside of the restaurant.

With his head buried in his hands, Katy could feel his brokenness.

She snapped a quick photo of him through the window, then made the decision not to eat her food on the go, but instead, go inside and sit with him.

“I saw him crying, he broke down and I didn’t know who this person was,” she said. “I had seen him through the community. He used to have a bike with a cart.”

Katy soon found out his name was “Pops,” a homeless man in the area who was ready to give up. He told Katy that he was lonely and out of hope.

“He said, ‘I want it to end. I want it to go,’” Katy told 41 Action News. “That’s when I told him, ‘Today is not the day.’”

Not only was his spirit broken, but at 57 years old, Pops’ body was literally broken. Living in constant pain, Pops told Katy he has seven broken bones that he hasn’t been able to afford to get treated.

“He said, ‘I have a broken collarbone, I have broken ribs, I’ve been beaten up,’” Katy told FOX 43. “He needed somebody to step in and help him. That’s what I did.”

Katy posted that heart wrenching photo of Pops to Facebook, and asked the virtual world for some help.

13 She brought Pops back to her place for the day, and launched a YouCaring fundraiser in hopes of showing her new friend “that this world is still full of good people.”

Support came pouring in from the community with donations of money, clothing and other basic items to help get Pops back on his feet.

He was able to have a nice bath, a warm and safe bed to sleep in, and he received a haircut from Katy’s friend, Pamela Denson.

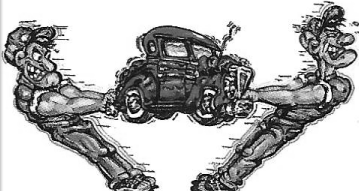

“He was very nice and a soft-spoken gentleman,” she said. “He said all he did was pray. The only way he knew how to ask for help was to pray.”

After spending the day at her home, Katy took Pops to the hospital to get the medical care he needs. In the meantime, she’s been hard at work raising money for his medical bills, and once again, the community has not disappointed.

In just 11 days, more than 350 people have helped raise more than $11,000 for Pops. And it’s all because Katy’s heart broke for someone else’s brokenness.

Eternal Love

One day at work, Amanda received a beautiful flower bouquet. In it, she counted 11 flowers and found a short note in it. It was written in beautiful lettering and said: "My love for you will last until the day the last flower in this bouquet dies." The note was from her husband who had gone on a business trip.

Unsure as to what to make of the message, she went home in the evening and soaked the flowers with water. One day after another, the flowers became a little less beautiful until they all died. All but one flower. This was the day when she realized that there was one artificial flower in the bouquet that would last forever.

The Man Who Moved a Mountain

There are people who say love can move mountains. This might not be physically possible, but Dashrath Mahjhi, also known as the 'Mountain Man,' came quite close. In one day of his life, his wife fell while crossing a nearby hill and hurt herself seriously.

She needed quick medical assistance, but that wasn't possible due to the hill that isolated their small village from the next town. Tragically enough, his wife died from the serious injuries before Dashrath could do anything about it. It was the night when Dashrath Manjhi decided to carve a small path through the mountain in order to give his village easier access to medical assistance.

It was an ambitious plan and he was heavily ridiculed for it. But after working for 22 years with the greatest determination and willpower, a path was carved into the hill. Even though he was initially mocked and ridiculed for his mission to give his hometown easier access to the nearby town, he finally succeeded. His life's work helped to reduce the distance between the two towns from 55 km to only 15 km, so that never again such a thing would happen.

A Well-Deserved Prom Night

Alex and his grandmother always had a unique bond with each other. He would spend hours with her, listening to his grandmother's stories of a lifetime. She once told him that she had met his grandfather a long time after graduating from high school. This was also the reason why she was never asked out to go to prom.

When the day of Alex's prom had arrived, his grandmother was so excited for him. She had watched him save money for months so that he could afford a tuxedo and even a limousine. His grandmother eagerly waited to find out who Alex would be taking to prom. But to her great surprise, he told her that he would be taking her to prom. He told her that every woman deserves to go to prom, no matter if they are 18 or 80.

The Bicycle Ride

It is the year 1975, when Charlotte Von Sledvin, a 19 year old student of a Swedish Royal Family, travels to India to get a portrait made by a gifted artist. The artist was born into a poor Indian family of the lowest cast, also known as the "untouchable." Despite the incredibly difficult circumstances,

The artist named Pradyumna Kumar Mahanadia had gained an outstanding reputation for being a gifted painter. His reputation led Charlotte Von Sledvin to travel all the way to India to get her portrait done. By the time the portrait was finished, the two had fallen in love. Pradyumna was fascinated with Charlotte's beauty.

Never before had he seen a more beautiful woman from Western world. He gave his best to capture all her beauty in the portrait, yet never fully succeeded. Nonetheless, the portrait was magnificent and Charlotte fell for his simplicity and his beautiful character. Because of him, she spontaneously decided to stay longer in India. Out of a couple of days became weeks and then even months. The two had fallen so deeply in love that they decided to get married according to traditional Indian rituals. Unfortunately, the time came when Charlotte had to leave again in order to complete her studies in London. Thousands of miles separated the two but their feelings for each other never changed.

They stayed in contact through letters, which they exchanged almost weekly with each other. Naturally, the newlyweds terribly struggled with the great distance between each other. Charlotte offered her husband to buy him air tickets, which he refused. He had, not only decided to complete his studies first, but he had also set his mind on reuniting with the love of his life on his own terms. He even made her the promise that he would do anything he can to see her again. After Pradyumna had finished his studies, he took all his possessions and sold them. Unfortunately, the money he earned didn't even come close to a flight ticket.

All he could afford was a cheap and used bicycle. Many would have been greatly disappointed, some would have even given up. But not Pradyumna. Instead of allowing the difficult circumstances to stop him from seeing his beloved wife again, he made the decision to use what he had in order to see her again.

Nothing could stop him from reuniting with his wife, even if that meant an exhausting bicycle ride half around the world. His decision was the beginning of a bicycle journey from India to the Western world. Pradyumna took all his paintings and brushes along with him in order to financially support his endeavor.

His voyage led him through 8 countries and took more than 4 Months. But eventually, he arrived at Charlotte's hometown in Sweden and finally saw her again. From then on, the 2 did never leave each other's side for too long.

Love Letter from the Caribbean

In 1907, David Hurd moved from his hometown in Jamaica to New York City. The migration wasn't easy for the young man and he became terribly homesick. He missed his hometown and the company of his friends. In order to distract himself, David Hurd began searching for a potential pen-friend from his homeland. He found a woman called Avril Cato from the Caribbean who was interested in establishing a correspondence with him. The two slowly get to know each other, with one letter after the other. One year later, the two had fallen in love with each other, without having ever met. Seven years later, Avril and David met for the first time. It was the day before their wedding, as David had proposed to her shortly before. The two married and had 6 Children.

A Heartwarming Farewell Gift

When Gene was diagnosed with Melanoma, he had only been given 6 Weeks left to live. It was a shocking diagnosis but Gene decided to use the time he had left to make all the necessary arrangements for his wife Carol, with whom he had been married for 30 years. He cashed out his pension and used the money to pay off the house they were living in. The Second step was to arrange a trip for his wife Carol and the rest of the family to Italy. When they visited a specific church in Venice, a priest was already waiting for the couple. It was in this church that Gene's parents had married more than 50 years ago.

At that day, Gene and Carol renewed their wedding vows and had the most beautiful day. After Gene had died, his wife Carol discovered that he hid hundreds of Post-it notes around the entire house, shortly before he died. Throughout the course of many months, she found one note after another.

The notes are beautiful and very personal statements meant to encourage Carol in this difficult time. But Gene also reminded his wife in these statements to fully enjoy every aspect of life, to sell his car and to move on with her life. It was the most heartwarming farewell gift one could ever imagine.

Getting to know the Lutherans

The Holy Trinity (Mark 12:29-30)

It may surprise you to learn that the word Trinity is not in the Bible. It is thought to be coined by an Early Church scholar named Terullian, who is the oldest known writer to use the term Trinity, as well as the earliest writer to give us a formal explanation of a trinitarian theology. The word triune simply means “three in one.”

No one has ever been able to adequately explain the divine concept of a three-in-one God, but from the very moment He revealed Himself, God has been worshiped as one God for all humankind. Deuteronomy 6:4 reads: “Hear O Israel: The Lord our God, the Lord is one.”

In praise of this one triune God, there emerges a personal trinity of faith, where worship involves all of me: body, soul, and strength. How could it be otherwise?

Some Riddles

Locked Store Room

The store room of your house is locked with a certain kind of padlock that can be closed without a key but requires a key to open which you own and there is no duplicate key. You decide to move your old stuff to the storeroom. After keeping the things carefully, you lock it back again perfectly. The next day, a dead body is found in your closed store room.

Since only you have the key to the store room and you live alone, the police suspect you as the murderer. You can't understand anything when suddenly a thought strikes your mind. There is a possible way using which the dead body could have been placed by someone else. Can you find that way so that you can tell the police and prove yourself to be innocent?

Murder on Sunday Morning

Shauna was killed one Sunday morning. The police know who they are going to arrest from this bit of information:

April was getting the mail.

Alyssa was doing laundry.

Reggie was cooking.

Mark was planting in the garden.

Who killed Shauna and how did the police know who to arrest?

The Missing Dollar

Three men go to stay at a hotel and they are charged $30 for the room.

They split the cost with ten dollars each.

Later the manager finds out that the rate is $25 and gives the bellboy $5 to return to the guests. On the way to the room the bellboy reasons that $5 would be difficult to split among three people so he pockets $2 and gives $1 to each person.

Now each person paid $10 and got back $1. So they paid $9 each, totaling $27. The bellboy has another $2, adding up to $29. Where is the missing dollar?

100 Eggs With 100 Cents

You must buy hundred eggs with hundred cents. There are three types of eggs and you will need to buy all three types of eggs. Goose eggs must be bought in multiples of 20.

1 Chicken egg cost 5 cents

1 Duck egg cost 1 cent

20 Goose eggs cost 1 cent

How many chicken, duck and goose eggs do you need to buy?

Answers to Riddles

DATA MASTER: Nikki Hamilton

Locked Store Room

When you were inside the room, the murderer replaced the padlock with his own one that was identical to your original padlock. When you locked the store room, you did not require a key and there was nothing abnormal for you.

When you left, the murderer opened the padlock with his key, placed the dead body inside and replaced his padlock with the original padlock back in place. He then locked it without any problem.

Murder on Sunday Morning

April killed Shauna because there is no mail delivery on Sundays.

The Missing Dollar

The problem is that the question is cleverly phrased to conceal what is really going on.

Let's locate all that money. There are two ways to think about how much money is out there to be found. The way that this question is tricky is that it combines that two ways.

The first way is this. How much money did the guys pay originally?

The second way is this. How much money did they end up paying?

So if it is the first way, then clearly the total we need to account for is the $30.

So let's see what happens to that $30. The manager keeps $25, the bellboy gets $2 and the guys get $3 back. That adds up fine.

Now let's look at the second way. How much money did they end up paying? Well $27 dollars, and $25 of it went to the owner and $2 to the bellboy. Now, that adds up too.

The problem with the question is that the the $2 that the bellboy gets are contained in the $27 that they end up paying so we shouldn't expect them to add to anything meaningful.

100 Eggs With 100 Cents

19 Chicken eggs cost 95 cents

1 Duck egg cost 1 cent

80 Goose eggs cost 4 cents

Total of $(19 + 1 + 80 = 100)$ 100 eggs for $(95 + 1 + 4 = 100)$ 100 cents

Quotes From Thinkers Around The World

“Yesterday is history, tomorrow is a mystery, today is a gift of God, which is why we call it the present.”

Bill Keane

“Listen to the mustn'ts, child. Listen to the don'ts. Listen to the shouldn'ts, the impossibles, the won'ts. Listen to the never haves, then listen close to me... Anything can happen, child. Anything can be.”

Shel Silverstein

“You may say I'm a dreamer, but I'm not the only one. I hope someday you'll join us. And the world will live as one.”

John Lennon

“Hold fast to dreams,
For if dreams die
Life is a broken-winged bird,
That cannot fly.”

Langston Hughes

“When we love, we always strive to become better than we are. When we strive to become better than we are, everything around us becomes better too.”

Paulo Coelho, The Alchemist

“There is neither happiness nor misery in the world; there is only the comparison of one state with another, nothing more. He who has felt the deepest grief is best able to experience supreme happiness. We must have felt what it is to die, Morrel, that we may appreciate the enjoyments of life.

" Live, then, and be happy, beloved children of my heart, and never forget, that until the day God will deign to reveal the future to man, all human wisdom is contained in these two words, 'Wait and Hope.'”

Alexandre Dumas

“They say a person needs just three things to be truly happy in this world: someone to love, something to do, and something to hope for.”

Tom Bodett

There is only one heroism in the world: to see the world as it is, and to love it.

Romain Rolland

Within you there is a stillness and sanctuary to which you can retreat at any time and be yourself

Hermann Hesse

If you find someone who makes you smile, who checks up on you often to see if you're okay. Who watches out for you and wants the best for you. Who loves and respects you. Don't let them go. People like that are hard to find.

Franz Kafka

Don't bend; don't water it down; don't try to make it logical; don't edit your own soul according to the fashion. Rather, follow your most intense obsessions mercilessly.

Franz Kafka

In the fight between you and the world, back the world.

Franz Kafka

I no longer know If I wish to drown myself in love, vodka or the sea.

Franz Kafka

It's only because of their stupidity that they're able to be so sure of themselves.

Franz Kafka

I never wish to be easily defined. I'd rather float over other people's minds as something strictly fluid and non-perceivable; more like a transparent, paradoxically iridescent creature rather than an actual person.

JEWELS FROM THE WORD

AQUARIUM LIFE

I've had aquariums off and on all my married life. My husband said one time, "I don't know why you bother with an aquarium. The kids don't even look at it." I said, "But I'm not keeping an aquarium for the kids. I'm keeping it for me, because I love fish."

Several times I have bought male bettas which don't require an aquarium. They can live in a fishbowl on the window sill, but they must be kept in individual fishbowls. They swirl through the water, hiding and darting around the plastic plant, coming to the surface when I drop food in the water.

If one male betta catches sight of the other male betta in a nearby fishbowl, he ruffles up his fins to make himself look big and threatening. I try to keep them far enough apart so they can't see each other, with the fish food container in between, but sometimes it just happens. Male bettas don't get along with most other fish, especially each other, and not even the female betta.

Now neons on the other hand are compatible with almost every other tropical fish. They are small with a fluorescent stripe down their side and they run in gangs. If you see one, you will see them all, for the rest are right beside him. There is no discernible leader, just a bunch of followers all moving together.

Guppies are the flashy ones in the aquarium tank. They have long multicolored tails and float around near the top, showing off.

Another tropical fish frequently found in aquariums is the gourami, a fish that grows pretty large and is a predator.

We have had shrimp, frogs, crabs, and eels. They really stand out from the standard fish.

One of our favorites is the angelfish. Big, round, flat, silver coloring and angel wings, they float gently through the water and reflect light. They get along with everyone. Oh, and we love the goldfish, the one that can live under most any circumstances, in any old bowl or jar, as long as the water is changed once in a while and a pinch of food is dropped into the bowl now and then. But the goldfish will only grow as big as the bowl will allow.

Which fish are you?

"If it is possible, as much as depends on you, live peaceably with all men." Romans 12:18 NKJV

We live our lives in a glass bowl. Let's live in peace with our fellow bowl-mates and let our shiny souls reflect the light of Christ to all who see us.
